As they will be generally at the desks of the people, who call for stamps can also call for Brown's Iron Bitters, the great family tonic. Failure of Owens & Barkley.
The financial embarrassment of Messrs. Owens & Barkley, which has made necessary an assignment for the benefit of their creditors, is generally deplored by the community. The step was made necessary by the shrinkage in value of an immense stock and the difficulty of collecting the money due the firm by their creditors. The creditors, nearly all of whom are in the East, appreciating the high personal character and business integrity of both Mr. Barkley and Mr. Owens, offered any accommodation in the way of extending their paper that might be desired, but the firm deemed it wiser to give up than to continue to struggle under a burden of debt.

The firm of Owens & Barkley began business in 1864 as the successors of Owens, Pinkard & Barkley, who were burned out a year previously, and lost by the disaster about $40,000. They took one of the houses now occupied by them on Second street and began upon a limited scale of business, which grew to be one of the most extensive of the kind in the State, covering territory in the three States of Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia. Their yearly sales frequently aggregated $250,000. They have in their several departments eleven horses over one hundred feet long, and usually carry a stock valued at from $150,000 to $200,000. Most members of the firm have been active in promoting all useful enterprises for the improvement of the city, and have contributed to such purposes liberally of their means. In their business misfortunes they have the sincere sympathy of their friends and the general public, who hope that an arrangement will be made that will not necessitate the removal of so important a business from the city.

Tax examining trial of Mrs. John Tucker, who is charged with killing her husband last Sunday morning, took place at Sardis yesterday, and resulted in her being held to appear for further trial at the Circuit Court. She was lodged in jail at this place last night. The testimony developed that Mr. and Mrs. Tucker had quarreled the day before the killing, during which she had been struck with a broom handle and had been removed to Lexington to prevent a mob from lynching him.

THE following appears in a Boston society journal:—"This say"—always good authority—that Miss Cleveland is strong and healthy, and has such perfect command down everything of a frivolous nature when she presides for her brother in the White House. All this recalls Mrs. Hayes, who contented upon her terms with her hair smooth and shining as black as satin, and never changed the style. Why? For the very good reason that she was too vain to know how to dress becomingly. At least it is a very pardonable vanity. Now we shall see if Miss Cleveland has not the same sort of vanity.

Naturally, the Clevelands are talked of a good deal just now, and their entrance into the White House is eagerly and gratefully for her brother's Mrs. McElroy has for her brother, she will always be remembered as a woman saying, but Mrs. McElroy "wears well." It is not strangers only that are charmed with her, but those who meet her frequently find her to be a well-to-do lady as given by Webster—a well bred woman.

"Don't flounder around so!" said the crabbed mackerel.

"No, I shall—low of a doubt of it," replied the other.

In Morocco when a thief is caught in most cases he is put to death. He is asked to hold up both hands. He is then asked which hand he would prefer to have in his possession, and when he has made his choice the other is cut off. When a thief has lost both hands and also his feet, he loses his head and stops stealing.

Taught Him Politeness.
[Austin Staffing.]

The pay train stopped at Willow Bend to pay the railroad hands and to liquidate claims for cattle in that section. A young, hungry-looking granger stepped up to the smart young man in who was dispensing the cash in the rear end of the car.

"Got my name on your books, Mister?"
"How should I know unless you tell me your name?"

"Kunkley, you are. You have got the edge on me there. Well, my name is Rufus McKonkey."

"Yes," said the young man referring to the books. "My McKonkey, I have got you down for a hog."

"Have me down for a hog, have you? Well, I'll have you down for a half an hour, but I'll be on top of you wakin' it sooner excitin' to you, if you don't revise that expression. Now, say after me: 'Colonel McKonkey, School Trustee, Fourth District—Your name, sir, is on this here list as a boyner field creditor of the I. and O. N. G. Railroad; which amount $10, the value of a spotted Berkshire hog; said amount of $10 I do me proud to hand to you. Won't you have a cigar, Colonel?'"

"The money," said the assistant paymaster repeated after Mr. McKonkey word for word, handed Mr. McKonkey $10 and then gave him a cigar.

"Colonel McKonkey put the hammer of his six shot shorter back to half-cock, and then strode out, muttering: "Some city chaps think they're smart, but they'll be learnin' politeness an' grammar."
